LightYouCanHear - GIULIO CORDA

Giulio Corda aka LightYouCanHear. I began my career as the lead singer of the italian band Giuliodorme, signing a record deal with BMG that led to the release of an album (Venere), multiple singles, and live performances, as well as appearances on TV shows across Italy. Later, I founded BenkaRecords, an independent label and creative hub, producing and releasing works for various artists, including my solo album (Giulio Corda – Sei+1) and a collaborative project, Guna, with Andrea Moscianese (aka Mug hen), a guitarist and composer whose credits include work with Joe Lally (Fugazi).

After concluding my work with BenkaRecords, I moved to Helsinki and focused on refining my craft as a composer and producer. A shift to writing in English marked a new chapter, and in September 2024, LightYouCanHear debuted with the single Breaking Bad, the first of eight tracks set to be released monthly.

In this electropop debut, songs with a creative, singer-songwriter essence are infused and transformed by electronic production, designed to generate contrasts and unpredictability. The vocal melodies intertwine with electronic beats and synthesizers, crafting atmospheres that oscillate between bursts of intense energy and more introspective moments. The occasional use of the guitar, which gains greater prominence in live performances, adds depth to a journey through soundscapes that are deliberately varied yet never alienating.
